

TWENTY CENTS

IS THE AMOUNT SECURED BY THIEF

From the Seidle Residence in Montgomery—A Few Footprints the Only Clue.

From Montgomery Journal.

Between two o'clock and four o'clock this morning the house of W. W. Seidle, 415 Washington avenue, was entered by some one with burglarious intent.

So far as had developed this morning the would-be burglar must have felt like 30 cents, as the sum of his failure to distinguish between meum and thum in his raid amounted to only 20 cents.

The occupants of the Seidle home last night were Mr. Seidle himself and Dr. A. C. Kirkpatrick and T. J. Curran, who have rooms there, Mrs. Seidle being away at Dothan with her sick mother.

The rooms of Mr. Seidle and Mr. Curran were locked and were not entered. Dr. Kirkpatrick, however, slept with an eye to whatever breeze might be astir to moderate the sultry air, and the thief possessed himself of the doctor's clothes and carrying them in to the hallway went through them. Just twenty cents happened to be all of the sum of the realm in pocket at the time and the despoiled Seidle seemed then to have gone his way.

The thief was evidently in search of money, for he seemed to have left the family silver untouched, and, either refused to take it, or he did not overlook Dr. Kirkpatrick's watch and stick pin on the dresser.

Mr. Seidle said, in speaking of the occurrence. He sure would have stuck me if he had got into my room as I had $200 hid away in my jeans."

The intruder, it is seen very clearly from his footprints, stepped from the fence to the porch of the residence and entered through a window, and in leaving went the same way. This is determined by his dropping a bit of paper taken from Dr. Kirkpatrick's garments containing a memorandum.

The track is apparently that of a white man.

BOYS, MIND YOUR MOTHER, SHE KNOWS BEST.

It is said that Mrs. Holder, mother of the young man who was killed last night, begged her son not to go to the fire, when the alarm was given. The mother's heart might have had a premonition of danger but she failed to impress the boy. He thought he could keep out of danger, as he had seen many fires, and went anyway. He saw an opportunity to assist the firemen in playing the hose, and joined in. Soon afterward the explosion occurred that drove a missile through his brains and his lifeless body was taken home to a heartbroken, widowed mother. He was her support.

Mrs. J. E. Dickenson of Bainbridge, Ga. is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Robert Boyd, on North Oyster street.

DIDN'T TRY TO GET AWAY.

Little Bud Travis, who was being taken to East Lake yesterday by Deputy Hicks of Geneva didn't try to elude the officer here yesterday evening. It is said that he had some friends who lived on W. Main street, and they had invited him out to take dinner with them. He told his friend that he would have to hurry back to town, as Mr. Hicks would be uneasy about him, and he went back to look up the officer of his own volition.

MAD DOG.

A mad dog caused considerable excitement this morning when it came down West Main street, and turned at Alice street, going down to the Central R. R., where it set up a howl. An officer was phoned for and Chief Demongus, together with P. B. Kelly, hunted the hound and killed it, much to the relief of the ladies in that section of town.

STEEL POSTAL CARS

The frightful accident which recently occurred on the New York and New Orleans, limited, at Moberly, Tenn., in which the engineer was killed, and three mail clerks were seriously, if not fatally, injured has aroused the mail clerks of Tennessee, once more to take up the question of raising upon the government the property and the justice of requiring that railroads provide steel cars for the postal service.

This is a question which has recently been agitated during the last few years. It is duly pointed out that the postal clerks are exposed to especial danger on the railroads and catch the brunt of it whenever an accident occurs. But so far there has been but little interest and persistency of action and matters remain much as they are before, until a new disaster gives new emphasis to the situation.

In the Tennessee accident, the mail car was literally demolished and mail clerk was hurled thirty feet and lodged in a tree-top with his back broken; another was injured quite as seriously, and a third was badly, if not fatally, injured.

Small wonder that the postal clerks, from whose ranks have come the only victims in this accident, except the engineer, should have started themselves once more to action, and it is hoped their protest will be of some avail. It is their present purpose to memorialize the Tennessee representatives in congress to take up the matter in the next session of the national legislature and carry through a bill requiring all railroads to provide steel mail cars.

It is hoped that the Tennessee representatives will give the matter their cordial support, and that moreover, every other member of congress who has at heart the interests and the actual life of a large and deserving class of public servants, peculiarly exposed to danger and death, will unite in carrying this measure to a successful consummation.

THE DOTHAN VARIETY WORKS BURNED

DYNAMITE EXPLODES AND FLYING MISSILES KILL HERCHEL HOLDER AND INJURE GUS. HOLLAND AND FLOYD MORRIS.

The Loss Is Estimated at Forty-Five Thousand Dollars, With Seven Thousand Dollars Insurance—Fire of Unknown Origin.

Works Employed From 30 To 50 Men

One of the worst disasters of the year occurred this morning about three o'clock when the entire mill plant of the Dothan Variety Works was destroyed by fire and Herchel the 18-year-old son of Mrs. George Holder of Appleton street, was killed by the explosion of dynamite.

Fire was discovered in the boiler room about 2:50 o'clock and the alarm immediately sent in but when the fire department arrived the main building was a solid mass of flame inside. As the nearest water plug was at the Central compress and the flames being on the opposite side of the mill it no doubt would have been useless to try to save anything but the dry kiln, had the alarm been sent in sooner.

Four box cars full of lumber stood under the shed, and were also burned.

In front of the mill there was a shed on the Central side track, that was being used as a tool house, and which contained dynamite, paint, some oils, and a great number of spikes. As the fire grew larger the tool house caught and Morris, the fireman, accompanied by Gus Holland and Herchel Holder, took the hose and attempted to put out the flames in the car so that they might be able to get nearer the mill, when a great explosion occurred, filling the air with scraps of iron and spikes. One piece of iron hit Floyd Morris on the arm and others hit Gus Holland in the back and as he started to run he fell to the ground, unconscious and no one was able to find out what hit him, but he was not hurt seriously. A flat piece of iron was driven into Holder's head, turning him a complete somersault, and killing him instantly. He leaves a widowed mother and several sisters.

The plant was owned by W. C. Picheur, who is spending some time on St. Andrews Bay trying to regain his health, which gave away some months ago. The plant was valued at $45,000, with but $7,000 insurance.

The explosion created consternation in the crowd and scattered pieces of iron for several hundred yards in different directions. The box cars standing on the siding of the Central railroad had pieces of iron buried in them, some going through, one man being hit with a piece who stood on the opposite side of the compress, some distance away. Young Holder was not a member of the fire department, but had joined with Morris and Holland, and was playing the hose on the car, which the Central road used as a tool and plumb house.

No one anticipated that the car contained explosives, and it was remarkable that many other people were not killed, for hundreds had gathered around after the alarm had been turned in, and some were standing within a few feet of those who held the fire hose. Windows of houses a hundred yards away were shattered. In the car were spikes, fishplates, bolts and scraps of iron, and these were hurled with great force in every direction.

The mother of the young man who was killed was grief-stricken when her son was brought home dead. The boy's father died last year. For some time he had been employed by J. W. Jones, the restaurant man, but recently worked with E. C. Cumber, on S. T. Andrews street.

The burning of this mill is a distinct loss to Dothan, for from 30 to 50 men were employed each day.

Leone Picheur, son of W. C. Picheur, and he had no idea what his father's plans would be till he saw him. He went to Panama City this morning, and Mr. Picheur will likely return to the city tonight.

This plant was new, having been built during the last two or three years, but had been formerly operated where the Picheur Opera building now stands, on the old Poplar Head site.

THE COURT.

The United States Court is moving slowly today, still on the same case, the U. S. vs. a saw mill and 25 horse power engine and boiler.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Malone returned last night from a month's visit to Mrs. Malone's mother at Martin, Tenn.

Mrs. W. C. Pratt and Mrs. J. C. Hicks left last night for Washington on a ten days visit.

Mrs. J. M. Brown and daughter, Alta, returned today after a few days visit to Banker.

Mr. J. A. Baxton returned today from Youngblood.

Mr. H. White returned to his home in Troy this afternoon.

FEARS IT IS BOLL WEEVIL.

Mr. H. A. Blount returned yesterday from his farm at Chumax, Ga., and very much fears that they have the dreaded boll weevil over there to contend with. He says that his cotton, which is eight feet high, in rows seven feet apart, has three and four hundred bolls to the stalk and that on some stalks, as many as a hundred bolls are punctured by what he believes to be the boll weevil.

MAGNANIMOUS!

Editor G. Ernest Jones, of the Dothan physician, who is managing the campaign in the wiregrass against constitutional prohibition, offering him $100 if he felt like coming over to the "cause." He didn't reply to the Doctor, but sent the letter to Rev. Brooks Lawrence who had thousands of copies of the letter printed in five stanzas, which are being distributed over the state. Editor Jones, after violating the confidence of a friend, is getting considerable free advertising out of the matter. He might have made a courteous inclination to the doctor's School Times.

Osborne, Turner. "We don't care to become a pest on any one's hobby, but we've looked up on once more to make a reasonable demand. We have kept quiet for a year under trying circumstances. We must that the city in journalism at the Kansas City be taught how to do up single wraps. Too many editors get all the paste on the paper and come on the wrapper. It takes up so much time to run out and hunt up a cork shaker to separate the paper and the wrapper. The man who can do up a paper in a neat single wrapper has composed more than the fellow who learns to write a flowery obituary about some old fossil who has wandered on to the bounte from which no traveler returns.

CENTRAL PRESIDENT

IS SUED BY WIFE FOR A DIVORCE.

Sensation Petition Charges Shocking Cruel Treatment.

Mrs. Cora L. Hanson of Macon, wife of Maj. J. Fletcher Hanson, president of the Central railroad, cotton mill owner and capitalist, and said by her to be worth $300,000, on Wednesday filed suit for divorce against him in the superior court here.

Mrs. Hanson says that Major Hanson in 1907 became infatuated with one Mrs. — Horner, and was assiduous in attentions to her for months, both publicly and privately, although notorious divorce proceedings were pending between Mrs. Horner and her husband in the Fulton county court in June, 1907.

Mrs. Hanson says that her husband insisted that she receive Mrs. Horner as her guest in Macon and that Mrs. Horner make their home her home at her pleasure.

Among other things, Mrs. Hanson alleges cruel treatment incidental to this condition. She says Major Hanson called her a liar; shot his finger in her face, so that she had to retreat toward the wall to dodge; that he gave the management of the household to one of their daughters, Mrs. Garrett, that servants were ordered to obey Mrs. Garrett, and that on another daughter's protest—Mrs. Rosa White of California, whom they called "Fan"—Mrs. Garrett threw a glass of water in her face.

Mrs. Hanson also says she was in such fear of her husband that she often slept in the bath room, with only a single cloth for her covering. She repeatedly refused to open her home to Mrs. Horner, she says, and her husband, becoming angry, threatened to abandon her and go to Europe.

Over 600 deserters from the army and navy are reported. This weather is hot enough to make them shirk drill duty

"Next month—the oyster," blabs some fellow. The oysters to be used next month ought to be caught now and placed on cold storage.

A young widow of Charlotte, N. C. has made the second unsuccessful attempt to take her life. She is said to be worried over financial troubles, though but 20 years old. This shouldn't be.

It is reported from one of the Louisiana parishes, that mosquitoes are killing calves. They haven't had to resort to that die here yet, but there's no telling how soon they will.

Jack Jansing, the heavyweigh champion, stopped off at Sal Lake City the other day, with his wife, and found no place to lay his head. The hotels didn't want him; the police headquarters of fered no relief.

Up at Pittsburg, Pa., where they do things, an aged couple married the other day. The woman was 81 and the man 51. The woman's 52-year-old son was present at the judge of probate's office, to certify that his mother was of age.

While that negro regiment is doing a war stunt in the neighborhood of Boston, we hope the weather is hot enough up there for those New Englanders to find out just its effects upon those colored soldiers—when they get to sweating.

It is dangerous to kick a cat. A New Yorker kicked a cat through a screened window the other day, and the cook, who was standing by, got some trash in her eyes from the rusty screens and now she has filed a suit for $100,000 damages.

Those Atlanta newspapers can start up something when times are dull. They have now found an old cat with a family of kittens, which is nursing a mouse some old rat has palmed off on her, and she seems to think as much of it as she does her kittens.

Hobson said something which his political enemies thought might be used against him, way back in the Brownville-Foraker trial. Now he is back home scraping it out with a stalwart candidate by the name of Davis, who wants the job from that congressional district.

ABOUT TO PASS SOME GOOD ONES.

The legislature has before it another bill looking to help matters along. If this legislature doesn't mind, going on like this, it will pass some bills that nearly all of us will have to brag on.

For instance. A bill is introduced looking to changing the manner of selecting jurors. We all know that when court meets there are men who hang around, expecting to be "caught on the jury," and they are so gentle till the sheriff can't get up and down the aisles without running over them. There are men who have a mania for sitting on the jury. Then there are men who have cases in court, who are glad to have a crowd hanging around handy, so that they might be summoned on the special venire, should one be needed. This new bill is to do away with that, and make the man who would hang around looking for such a place, ineligible by reason of that fact. The only objection to it is a proposition some one wanted to tack on, creating a jury commission to draw $5 a day for their work, and who are to be appointed by the governor.

We don't like the idea of having too many things left in the hands of the governor, for he has his hands full most of the time anyway, and too many appointive jobs to hand out creates a political whip that can be used to maintain a party organization. It grows plain trees where some think else ought to thrive better. The county commissioners can usually be depended upon to act in that capacity.

CHANGED HIS NAME.

South Georgia had a man who was perfectly wild for Joe Brown, while he was a candidate, and since he assumed the duties as governor. The South Georgia man thought so much of little Joe that he named a baby for him. The baby seemed to be doing well, up to a few weeks ago. The father then decided it couldn't thrive under the name of Joe Brown, since he's differed with the governor on some appointments. So he took the Joe Brown name away from the little baby boy, and fastened that of Guyte McLendon on in its place. Then he sat down and wrote the governor a letter, telling him that he needn't bother about sending a present, if he had ever considered it, for he had changed his mind, and therefore, the name of the boy. During all this mixup the boy hasn't been consulted, we fear. The father who displays such a changeable mind may get mad with Hon. Guyte and take the boy's name away from him again and throw it away. This thing may keep up till that boy becomes of age, or appeals to the legislature to fix a name for him, and make it fast.

We want to keep an eye on the case, and if the father starts any of his monkey business about retaining that boy, we wish to present the matter to the Georgia legislature, at its next regular monthly meeting, and have it acted upon. If this thing keeps on, that boy will have stickers all over him like a red hand grip that has been around the world, where names were passed on and torn off. Blood poison might set in, Dog Days being in session, too.

WANTS TO TAMPER WITH OUT MONEY.
McVey wants to send off and get a foreigner, with perfectly lovely long hair, and put him to designing some new paper money. Mac says the stuff we are now using is away behind the styles, and he doesn't see how we get along with it at all. He wants to carry out a color scheme, and make the one dollar bills a certain beautiful shade, the two another, the fives and tens another; and as for twenties and above, he hasn't completed his color card. When a person holds a hand with one of each in it, he will be considered a winner.

Mac is alright and we think more of him for doing something to earn his pay; otherwise, he might have served his time on the job and within ten years no one could remember who the secretary of the treasury was at this time. He is merely registering, making his mark, for the same reason that one feels a desire to carve his name in the capital dome, when he climbs it. We move the rules be suspended and that Mac be allowed to chisel his name on the very top, or to climb the Washington monument and cut it there, rather than have him tampering with the color of our money.

A BOY PRISONER.

Persia has an 11-year-old shah, playing around, trying to hold the job of being king. He's not playing either. He is crying to go home to his ma and his pa. This little boy, who ought to be on the streets, batting up flies, is having to play king to a great nation of clabber-heads, who pretend to think he is king. The kid is sick of it. His parents are not allowed to hang around and look through the blinds, not even allowed to see him.

This little boy's pa used to be king, but they fired him and gave the job to the boy, who doesn't want it, and would like to give it away. The fields and the woods are calling to him, and he can't keep his appointment to go fishing with the boys down on the creek. He's a prisoner, and too young to realize the gravity of the situation.

Over here in this country, if any set of bowers and scrapers and uniform wearers were to catch a boy and put him in a close room smelling of mildewed curtains, keeping a close watch over him, the police reserve would be called out, or a company of state militia would march up and demand his instant release and restoration to his wailing parents.

This king business has never succeeded in impressing itself on our people. We like the heads of our nation, but keep a string tied to them.

WHO PAYS FOR ADVERTIS-ING?

Recently in a small city a manufacturer of small wares asked his advertising manager in writing,
"Who pays for the advertising, I or the consumer?" The advertising manager was requested to answer the question at a dinner the manufacturer gave to his employees.

The advertising man was on hand at the dinner and when called on for his reply, began by saying: "Neither the manufacturer nor the consumer pays for the advertising, but the manufacturer who does not advertise does pay for it."

The advertising manager made this argument:

"You are making the same quality of goods as some of the men who don't advertise, are you not?
You are getting the same price from the trade, are you not? The bright retailers make exactly the same profit selling your goods,
and sell at the same retail prices,
don't they. You have spent exactly $70,000 advertising in the six years you have advertised and you have increased the volume of trade from $600,000 a year to $1,000,000 during that time.
Now tell me, do you see where either you or the retailer or the consumer has paid one cent of the $70,000?"

"The consumer gets the same quality, and a little more, than he would if he bought unadvertised goods, and in addition he knows who made the shoe and has a guarantee; the retailer makes the same profit, plus the big boost in helping him sell the goods; and you—why, you have simply laid down about $10,000 for advertising each year and got back over $66,000 worth of extra business which you could have gotten in no other way at that cost; and you also have added enough cash value to your good will to charge off
the whole advertising campaign.
Who in all this wide world but the non-advertising manufacturer is paying for your advertising?"
Really, the whole additional business was with new customers, and that meant a great deal to the "house."

A. S. Nunbaum, Batesville, Indiana, writes: "Last year I suffered for three months with a summer cold so distressing that it interfered with my business. I had many of the symptoms of hay fever, and a doctor's prescription did not reach my case, and I took several medicines which seemed only to aggravate it. Fortunately I insisted upon having Foley's Honey and Tar. It quickly cured me. My wife has since used Foley's Honey and Tar with the same success. N. H. McCallum.
